According to many public opinion polls, the environment is now the number one priority for most Canadians – ahead of healthcare, education and the economy. In recent months, political debate has also been dominated by the issue of climate change.

Ontario's commitment to the environment reflects this new political priority and will have major implications for Ontario's energy sector and the economy as a whole. The federal government has also signaled its intention to strengthen environmental policy in light of public reaction to its initial clean air plan.

Recognizing that environmental policy will be one of the major forces shaping the future of the energy sector, the 170-member Ontario Energy Association's annual blue-ribbon Energy Leaders' Roundtable this year will focus on energy, the environment and the economy.
